

Increase your productivity by investing in cloud and collaborative solutions

The world is a much bigger place and although up to a few years ago companies were chained to their desktops and office networks, remote working, document collaboration, email across all devices and the emergence of the tablet/phablet culture is now the norm. Cloud solutions are here to meet the ease-of-use and instant information requirements whilst increasing business efficiency, staff productivity, enabling a better work/life balance and saving companies money by reducing capital expenditure costs.

So what are “cloud solutions”? The word “cloud” has such diverse representations but if we were to match it against a few solutions they would cover, email and website hosting, workplace data security, document storage and file syncing, remote desktops and servers to complete your day-to-day work from the comfort of your own home and even business continuity, bringing an entire company infrastructure online in a disaster for immediate use over an internet connection. And these are just a small fraction of cloud productivity solutions that are available.

Lantrade Global Supplies, an innovative procurement specialist and logistics company needed an IT overhaul to increase their business efficiency, by leveraging cloud email and document storage services in order to meet client demands and supplier delivery targets.

“ Amazing Support set up our Office 365 email and business Dropbox. It was quite a lot of work as there were passwords missing, our domain provider couldn't be traced and then other key IT services were cancelled without us knowing. Amazing Support and their project engineers were fab and helped us all of the way through. ”
